HERMANN LOTZE'S WORKS.

We have received a circular from the publisher, S. Hirzel, of Leipzig, announcing an edition of the works of the distinguished philosopher named at the head of this article. This edition contains the works collected, partly from manuscript and partly from the notes taken at the courses of lectures by the pupils or students. It makes a series of small volumes. The first volume, the "Grundzuege der Psychologie," which was sent out to try the public demand, proved so much of a success that the publisher is encouraged to continue, and now comes out with the "Grundzuege der Praktischen Philosophie—dictate aus den Vorlesungen von Hermann Lotze." This will be followed by the outlines of six other expositions of Lotze: Those of the Philosophy of Religion, of the Æsthetic, of the History of Philosophy since Kant, of the Philosophy of Nature, of Logic and the Encyclopædia of Philosophy, and of Metaphysics. These will appear during the present year.

There will, of course, be an eager inquiry after these outlines, and we believe that they will prove much more useful than the heavier works of the same author—his "Mikrokosmos" and "System der Philosophie," and other works published during his life—as is suggested by the circular before us. [Ed.]

V.

Facts unably related . . . may prove the worst sort of deceit; and mere lies, judiciously composed, can teach us the truth of things beyond any manner. But to amuse ourselves with such authors as neither know how to lye, nor tell the truth, discovers a taste which methinks no one should be apt to envy.—Shaftesbury.

If God acts for an end or purpose, he necessarily desires something which he is without.—Spinoza.

Men deceive themselves in the conceit of their free-will from this:
